The abstract tree artwork of our Alto rug plays on symmetry with four mirroring panels, typical of Oriental rug designs from the first half of the 19th century. It's also the style of rug our interior designers would use at Soho Farmhouse to create its distinctive country look. They can also be found in the bedrooms of Soho House New York. The soft, tonal colour palette makes it easy to layer into any room or interiors setting, especially areas with a high footfall due to the rug's short wool pile. Hand-knotted in India, each of these rugs takes up to six months to craft, making each a worthwhile investment for your home.
