Product details

One in a series of 20 still-life photographs, this limited-edition piece is printed on natural Belgian linen, intended to be stretched and framed like an original canvas.

With connectivity as her theme, the artist assembles decommissioned mechanical moulds into sculptural compositions for each photograph in this series. Through it, she highlights the importance of repurposing old materials and focuses on ideas of sustainability and unity.

About the artist

Born in New Zealand and now based in Toronto, Anna Church is a fine-art photographer, sculptor and creator. Endlessly inspired by nature, the artist aims to use her work as a way of "cultivating connection" with people around her.
